IWF Cookie Policy

This Cookie Policy covers the services provided by the website iwf.sport (our Website”), owned and controlled by International Weightlifting Federation (“IWF” or “we”, “us” or “our”):

About cookies
In common with many other website operators, we may use standard technology called 'cookies' on our Website.

Cookies are small text files containing pieces of information that are stored by your browser on your computer's hard drive or other access device when you visit our Website. Depending on the services you request, or that are being made available on our Website, the information stored in a cookie may relate to your browsing habits on our Website, or a unique identification number so that our Website can "remember" you on your return visit. Cookies can be read by our Website on your subsequent visits. Generally speaking, cookies do not contain personal information from which you can be identified, unless you have offered such information to our Website.

How we use cookies
We use cookies in order to make our Website work, or work more efficiently, as well as to provide information to IWF.

The cookies on our Website are used to improve services for you through, for example:

- Measuring how many people are using services, so they can be made easier to use and there's enough capacity to ensure they are fast;
- Analysing anonymised data to help us understand how people interact with services provided on our Website so that we can make our Website services better.

What cookies we use and why we use them

The cookies use on our Website fall into two categories:

On-site cookies
These are our own cookies, controlled by us and used to provide information about usage of our Website. We may use on-site cookies that are necessary to deliver certain services to you – for example, to do things like save registration information, remember language selection and remember if you have voted in a poll. These cookies do not track your usage.

Third-party cookies
These are cookies found in other companies' internet tools, which we are using to enhance our Website. For example, we use Google Analytics to track things like the number of people that are using our Website, where they are coming from and what content they are viewing. This information is collected for research purposes only, it does not identify any individual and IWF will provide only use aggregated data from these analyses to third parties. This helps us to measure whether we could improve areas of our Website. We do not control these cookies and you should check the third-party websites for more information about these.

How to manage cookies
Most browsers automatically accept cookies, but you can usually change the preferences or settings on your web browser to control and manage cookies. The procedure for changing the preferences or settings depends on the web browser that you have chosen to use. If you wish to manage cookies yourself, or stop your computer or other device accepting cookies, go to the help section of your internet browser (for example Internet Explorer or Firefox) where you will find information on how to do this. In some cases, you can choose to accept cookies from our Website, but block them from third parties. In others, you can block cookies from specific advertisers, or clear out all cookies.

You have the ability to accept or decline cookies by modifying the settings in your browser. However, you may not be able to use all the interactive features of our site if cookies are disabled.
